SUICIDES—SWINDLED

One of the most poignant tragedies in connection with farm settlement in the north for many years was culminated at Hythe early on Sunday morning, when L. Howitt, aged 44 years, who came to Hythe only six weeks ago only to learn that he had been swindled out of valuable property in Vancouver in exchange for a practically worthless quarter section of raw homesteaded land, put an end to his troubles by blowing his brains out. Howitt leaves a wife and little daughter, aged 10 months, who are without funds for a home, and who must leave this week to seek a home with relatives at the Coast.

Howitt, who was a veteran of the Great War, owned valuable residential property in Vancouver. Meeting a man from the north, he agreed to an exchange of his property for what he was led to believe was a modern well equipped and improved farm in the famous Hythe district. Closing the deal without coming to see the place, he landed at Hythe six weeks ago, only to learn that his new property was a bush homestead on poor soil, on which only sufficient work had been done to pass inspection and secure patent. Immediately realizing the hopelessness of the land as a means for making a living, he returned from the vicinity to Hythe, where he has been endeavoring to discover some means of making sufficient to augment his soldier-pension to provide for a livelihood for himself and his little family. Discouragement became too strong for him, and his rash act was committed early Sunday morning.

Mrs. Howitt and her little daughter overcome by the calamity which has overtaken them, are leaving Friday to return to relatives in Vancouver. It is understood the R.C.M.P. are preparing to conduct an investigation into the deal made by Howitt, with a view to having his former property returned to his widow.

YTOWN MENTAL HOME DROPPED BY GOVERNMENT

Will Build New Addition to
Oliver Institution
Instead

All hope that Alberta's Social Credit government might turn the old Agricultural school at Youngstown into a mental hospital appears to have gone aglimmering with Monday's announcement from Edmonton, to the effect that a new addition to the Oliver institution be proceeded with, rather than the proposed renovation of the Youngstown building.

A special dispatch to Calgary Herald on Monday tells the story of blasted hopes.

EDMONTON, July 6 (Special Dispatch)—All consideration of housing mental patients according to categories of insanity, with different types in different institutions, has been dropped after long discussion between government departments, it was indicated on Monday as plans for construction of a new $100,000 addition to Oliver Mental Institute neared completion.

For the past three months it had been planned, tentatively, to renovate the old Youngstown Agricultural School as a new mental hospital, and possibly move some of the present patients from Ponoka, Red Deer or Oliver to that new institution.

Funds Provided

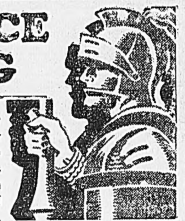

Saturday, however, Public Work Minister W. A. Fallow announced that the government would proceed with the Oliver addition, funds for which were provided in the estimates presented to the legislature at the last session.

As much as possible of the work there, Mr. Fallow said, will be hand labor; machinery will be used as little as possible in order to create employment. All workers, he added, will receive cash rather than scrip as wages, the money being taken from the public works department's treasury.

The new building will be connected with the present unit by a tunnel, Mr. Fallow said. The design of the addition was completed last winter. Mr. Fallow said that actual construction work will begin "in the near future."

Mr. Murray Manzer, who has been visiting for the past month at the home of his uncle, Mr. Rideout, left Sunday for his home at Woodstock, Ont.

INDEPENDENCE OR NOTHING

WITH the aim to live on in service through the span of many lifetimes, to what can a newspaper bind its policy so that it may endure in strength and grow in the respect of its readers. Movements spring up like mushrooms over night and wilt in a day. Governments have their brief years of power and pass into the limbo of forgotten things. Companies and corporations wax and wane with changing policies and changing hands.

TO none of these things can a good newspaper be fettered. It is larger than all. It must have a longer view, a broader scope, a deeper inspiration. It is not a voice for the opinions of the few but a faithful echo of the great voice of the people.

It must be free, it must be independent, to grow with the upward-striving national mind and to interpret faithfully the wishes of its citizens. Independence—or nothing. Independence is a newspaper's very life. Preserve that freedom of the press and you keep a safeguard to your own liberty.

By all means form your own opinions, from unbiased news columns. Your right to say what you think, your right to criticize freely—all these rights cherished by a free people are upheld by the independent newspapers of Southern Alberta.

MARKETING CANADA'S WHEAT

Many serious students of Canadian affairs consider that the maintenance of a reasonable standard of living for farmers and, indeed, for all in Western Canada, will require the production of an annual average of about 400 million bushels of wheat, which in turn will necessitate an annual export sale of about 280 millions.

Since 1929, the export sales of Canadian wheat have gradually dwindled from an average of over 300 million bushels a year to an amount last year (1935) of only 165 million bushels. These decreased sales represent lost markets.

To increase export sales from 165 million bushels annually, to at least 280 million, would appear to be a vital necessity for the welfare of Western Canada. How to these lost markets is one of the two major problems with which Western people are confronted—the other being the low purchasing power of wheat.

A serious consideration of methods that might be adopted in order to increase the sales of Canadian wheat must involve an accurate knowledge of which markets have been lost, and of the causes that brought about the decline in sales.

Prior to 1929, Canadian wheat and flour was sold each year on the markets in over seventy countries in the world and it is probably correct to state that over 300 million people, outside of Canada, in those days are bread that was improved because it contained at least some percentage of Canadian wheat.

Today many of those countries use no Canadian wheat at all, and all of them use less Canadian wheat than they did, some using substantially less.

Taken as a whole the statistics reveal that between 1923 and 1929 the world, exclusive of China and Russia, used 10.6 per cent on an average, of Canadian wheat in its mix of flour bread, whereas, during the period from 1929 to 1934 the average used was only 7.4 per cent.

Examined from another angle the situation can be expressed as follows: Between 1929 and 1935 the world international trade in wheat has suffered a decline of no less than 46 per cent.

In future articles, an attempt will be made to set out the details of most important foreign markets in which Canada prior to 1929, sold wheat and flour; to show the present sales to these markets, and so to appraise the extent of the decline that has occurred in the sales of Canadian wheat to each country separately. There perhaps an attempt can be made to discuss something of the factors that have brought about the decline in sales, both of world export wheat in general, and of Canadian wheat in particular, in these various countries.

A clear appreciation of just what has occurred, in as detail as can be obtained, should afford some foundation for suggestions to be made, it is hoped, to win back some, if not all, of the markets for Canadian wheat and flour that have been lost during the past few years.

New Locomotives Poems in Steel

Canada's newest railway locomotives are poems in steel—powerful, light-weight, semi-streamlined, machines capable of 110 miles an hour.

Radical departures in construction have been made in the Canadian Pacific Railway's five new "2000" engines, the first of which was taken over on Monday, July 27, at a brilliant ceremony which was broadcast on a nation-wide radio network through the facilities of the company's Communications Department, and which included addresses by Sir Edward Denny, G.B.E., K.C., J.L.D., chairman and president, Canadian Pacific Railway; His Worship Mayor Camille Houde of Montreal; William C. Dickerman, president of the Montreal Locomotive Company, where the new locomotive was built; and J. N. Burns, Canadian Pacific veteran.

The new Jubilee Locomotives, so named because they will go into operation in the jubilee year of the company's transcontinental passenger service, will pull a completely new type of train, lighter than the ordinary, semi-streamlined, and comfortable. The new coaches are under construction.
